

4-3-00

A

Please type a plus sign (+) inside this box ☒

PTO/SB/16 (12-97)

Approved for use through 09/30/2000. OMB 0651-0032

Patent and Trademark Office; U.S. DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

Under the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995, no persons are required to respond to a collection of information unless it displays a valid OMB control number.

03/31/00

03/31/00

09/541460
03/31/00

UTILITY PATENT APPLICATION TRANSMITTAL <small>Only for new nonprovisional applications under 37 C.F.R. § 1.53(b)</small>	Attorney Docket No.		98-035
	First Inventor or Application Identifier		John R. Stice
	Title	ANALOG TO DIGITAL CONVERTER UTILIZING RESOLUTION ENHANCEMENT
	Express Mail Label No.	EM222465721US

APPLICATION ELEMENTS	ADDRESS TO
Assistant Commissioner for Patents Box Patent Application Washington, DC 20231
See MPEP chapter 600 concerning utility patent application contents.
1. <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Fee Transmittal Form (e.g., PTO/SB/17) (Submit an original and a duplicate for fee processing)	5. <input type="checkbox"/> Microfiche Computer Program (Appendix)
2. <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Specification [Total Pages 17] (preferred arrangement set forth below) - Descriptive title of the Invention - Cross References to Related Applications - Statement Regarding Fed Sponsored R & D - Reference to Microfiche Appendix - Background of the Invention - Brief Summary of the Invention - Brief Description of the Drawings (if filed) - Detailed Description - Claim(s) - Abstract of the Disclosure	6. <input type="checkbox"/> Nucleotide and/or Amino Acid Sequence Submission (if applicable, all necessary) a. <input type="checkbox"/> Computer Readable Copy b. <input type="checkbox"/> Paper Copy (Identical to computer copy) c. <input type="checkbox"/> Statement Verify identify of above copies
3. <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Drawing(s) (35 U.S.C. 113) [Total Sheets: 5]	ACCOMPANYING APPLICATION PARTS
4. Oath or Declaration [Total Sheets: 2] a. <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Newly executed (original or copy) b. <input type="checkbox"/> Copy from a prior application (37 C.F.R. § 1.63(d)) for continuation/divisional with Box 17 completed <input type="checkbox"/> DELETION OF INVENTOR(S) Signed statement attached deleting inventor(s) named in the prior application, see 37 C.F.R. §§ 1.63(d)(2) and 1.33(b).	7. <input type="checkbox"/> Assignment Papers (cover sheet & document(s))
	8. <input type="checkbox"/> 37 C.F.R. § 3.73(b) Statement <input type="checkbox"/> Power of Attorney
	9. <input type="checkbox"/> English Translation Document (if applicable)
	10. <input type="checkbox"/> Information Disclosure Statement (IDS)/PTO-1449 <input type="checkbox"/> Copies of IDS Citations
	11. <input type="checkbox"/> Preliminary Amendment
	12. <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Return Receipt Postcard (MPEP 503) (Should be specifically itemized)
	13. <input type="checkbox"/> *Small Entity <input type="checkbox"/> Statement filed in prior application Statement(s) Status still proper and desired (PTO/SB/09-12)
	14. <input type="checkbox"/> Certified Copy of Priority Document(s) (if foreign priority is claimed)
	15. <input type="checkbox"/> Other: _____

16. If a CONTINUING APPLICATION, check appropriate box, and supply the requisite information below and in a preliminary amendment:

<input type="checkbox"/> Continuation	<input type="checkbox"/> Divisional	<input type="checkbox"/> Continuation-in-part (CIP)	of prior application No: _____
---------------------------------------	-------------------------------------	---	--------------------------------

Prior application information _____ Examiner _____ Group/Art Unit _____

For CONTINUATION or DIVISIONAL APPS only: The entire disclosure of the prior application, from which an oath or declaration is supplied under Box 4b, is considered a part of the disclosure of the accompanying application continuation or divisional application and is hereby incorporated by reference. The incorporation can only be relied upon when a portion has been inadvertently omitted from the submitted application parts.

17. CORRESPONDENCE ADDRESS
<input type="checkbox"/> Customer Number or Bar Code Label		(Insert Customer No. or Attach barcode label here):		or <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Correspondence address below
Name	Conrad O. Gardner
Address	7755 E. Marginal Way S., P.O. Box 3707, M/C 13-08
City	Seattle	State	Washington	Zip Code	98124-2207
Country	USA	Telephone	206-544-1017	Fax	206-655-5076
Name (Print/Type)	Conrad O. Gardner		Registration No (Attorney/Agent)	22,462
Signature			Date	3/30/2000

Burden Hour Statement: This form is estimated to take 0.2 hours to complete. Time will vary depending upon the needs of the individual case. Any comments on the amount of time you are required to complete this form should be sent to the Chief Information Officer, Patent and Trademark Office, Washington, DC 20231. DO NOT SEND FEES OR COMPLETED FORMS TO THIS ADDRESS. SEND TO: Assistant Commissioner for Patents, Washington, DC 20231.

IN THE UNITED STATES PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE

Application for LETTERS PATENT

for

5

ANALOG TO DIGITAL CONVERTER
UTILIZING RESOLUTION ENHANCEMENT

by

JOHN R. STICE

10

ANALOG TO DIGITAL CONVERTER
UTILIZING RESOLUTION ENHANCEMENT

STATEMENT AS TO RIGHTS TO INVENTIONS MADE UNDER FEDERALLY SPONSORED RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

5 This invention was made with U.S. Government support under F 30602-97-2-0099, Program Designation 950. The U.S. Government has certain rights to this invention.

BACKGROUND OF THE INVENTION

10 1. Field of the Invention

 The invention relates to analog to digital converters and more specifically, to an analog to digital converter providing resolution enhancement utilizing a reduced span analog to digital converter.

2. Description of the Related Art

15 General Background

 Analog to digital converters are circuit blocks which convert a span of analog voltages to digital numbers. It is customary to characterize this digital number, and consequently, the converter's resolution by the number of bits it contains.

 As a first example, if the digital output is composed of eight bits, the output 20 number can take on any of $2^8 = 256$ values. The analog input span's dynamic range is thus considered to be divided into 256 discrete quanta for an eight bit converter.

As a second example, if the output is composed of 10 bits, the output number can take on any of $2^{10} = 1024$ values. The analog input span's dynamic range is thus considered to be divided into 1024 discrete quanta for a 10 bit converter.

The mathematical reason for this is that a single bit represents two states, customarily referred to as a "1" and a "0". If there are eight bits, the total number of combinations of "1s" and "0s" is 2^8 .

Input signals exceeding the converter's input span (also referred to as its dynamic range) typically result in undefined behavior.

The complexity of an analog to digital converter is strongly related to the number of bits it can provide: In general, the more bits which are required, the more complex the converter is. Converter complexity adversely influences its cost and development schedule. From a cost and schedule perspective, it is desirable to develop a converter having only a small number of bits. Unfortunately, many applications require high resolution to meet overall system requirements. This may force a resultant complexity onto the analog to digital converter.

The hereinafter described invention offers a means of compromise between converter resolution (the number of bits) and converter complexity.

3. Statement of the Problem

Analog to digital converters having relatively high resolution are often needed to satisfy a system's requirements. Some circumstances allow the converter to be replaced by a special input preamplifier and a simpler converter, one providing few bits. This lowers overall circuit design complexity. The reduction in number of converter bits is compensated for by offset voltages applied to a special input amplifier.

Alternate and Prior Solutions to the Problem

High resolution conversion

- 5 The straightforward solution to the problem of digitizing at high resolution is to use a high resolution analog to digital converter. This technique is illustrated in Fig. 1 of the drawing.

Figure 1 shows as an example the transfer function of a system whose analog to digital converter's input span matches the system's full input signal range. To achieve 10 this match, the input signal was appropriately amplified as shown. In this example, the signal source input is plotted along the horizontal axis and extends between values of -0.01 and +0.1. This input signal is amplified by a conventional analog circuit to provide an output signal extending between values of -4 and +4. This amplified output signal is applied to the analog to digital converter's input. The converter's input span is 15 typically designed to coincide with the full range of the amplified signal thereby taking advantage of the analog to digital converter's entire dynamic range. The converter's span as shown in the figure extends across the entire vertical axis of the figure.

- If the system requirements state, for example, the input signal must be resolved to one part in 10,000, then a converter having at least 14 bits is required. Thirteen bits 20 is insufficient as the following computations illustrate:

$2^{13} = 8192$ The number of values a 13 bit converter can resolve.

$2^{14} = 16,384$ The number of values a 14 bit converter can resolve.

Since the required resolution is greater than that offered by a 13 bit converter, an additional 14th bit is required. This greatly complicates the converter's design.

5 Low-Resolution, Over-Sampled Converters ("Sigma-Delta" Converters)

A second means of utilizing low resolution converters for precision measurements is to sample the input signal at a high rate with the low-resolution converter. The digital output of the converter is reconstructed into an analog signal, also at the high rate. The reconstructed analog signal is compared with the original 10 analog signal using a precision comparator circuit. If the reconstructed signal is higher than the input, the digital output of the converter is mathematically reduced and the reduced value converted to an analog value which is again compared to the input signal. This process continues until the reconstructed signal is smaller than the input. The reconstructed signal is then mathematically incremented until it is again larger than the 15 input.

This has the effect of causing the reconstructed analog voltage to lock onto the input voltage in a servo-loop fashion. The mathematically determined values are applied to a digital filter whose output, at a much slower rate, is a precision digital representation of the input signal.

These types of converters are referred to as “sigma-delta” converters and can provide high performance. For example, an analog to digital converter consisting of a single bit can be used to provide a conversion whose resolution can exceed 20 bits.

5 A disadvantage of these converters is they cannot easily track rapidly changing input signals. It is easy for their servo-lock on the input signal to become broken if the slew rate of the input signal exceeds a fixed amount.

Patent Literature

10 U.S. Patent 4,183,016, Sawagata, “Parallel Analog-To-Digital Converter With Increased Resolution”

This patent utilizes an offset reference voltage to reduce the level of the input signal. However, this patent reduces the input signal by only a single, least significant bit, which is then added on to the converted signal. In contrast, the present AD converter system separately converts a reference voltage, comprised of potentially more than a least significant bit. This voltage is then subtracted from the input voltage, which is then converted. The converted reference voltage is then added to the converted reduced input voltage. The present invention allows for a greater improved resolution, for input signals which have a large DC level imposed on a small AC signal.

20 U.S. Patent No. 5,250,948, Bernstein et al., “High Level Resolution Enhancement for Dual-Range A/D Conversion”

This patent discloses a dual range A/D in which there are two possible signal paths. If the input signal is small, then the first path, which contains an input amplification, is used. If the input signal is large, the second path, which contains unity gain, is used. In contrast, the present AD converter system utilizes a single input path in which the input is reduced by an offset voltage to eliminate any DC component of the signal. The preconverted offset is then added to the signal conversion to provide the conversion of the full input signal.

- 5 U.S. Patent No. 5,608,399, Coleman, Jr., "Resolution Enhancer Circuit for Analog to Digital Conversion"

This patent provides conversion to a wide ranging analog input signal. If the signal exceeds the limit of the A/D, then the input is scaled down. If the input is much 10 less than the range of the A/D, then the input is scaled up. The difference between the prescaled and scaled signal is separately input to the A/D to provide the final converted output. In contrast, the present AD converter system is directed to only eliminating the DC component and input signal, to allow for higher resolution of the AC component. The DC component is separately digitized and added to the AC converted output.

15 BRIEF SUMMARY OF THE INVENTION

The present AD converter system concerns those signals which have a low frequency component (such as DC) superimposed upon an AC component. The magnitude of the AC component must be less than or equal to one-half the span of the converter. The majority of signal transducers, such as pressure to voltage converters, 20 satisfy this requirement. For these signals, the present invention provides a high resolution ADC with the simplicity advantage inherent in a reduced resolution ADC. This is accomplished by first connecting the input signal through a programmed gain preamplifier. The preamplifier matches the full range of the ADC to only the AC component portion of the input signal. In order to cover the entire input signal, the ADC's range is complemented by an offset value. The advantage of this technique is the preamplifier, designed to amplify the input signal at high gain, while applying the offset value at low gain. A digital summing junction combines the analog to digital conversion results with the offset value, resulting in a higher precision overall conversion.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE SEVERAL VIEWS OF THE DRAWING

Figure 1 is an example of a system having a full-scale analog to digital converter.

10 The vertical axis is the input span of the analog to digital converter;

Figure 2 is an example of a system having a partial-span analog to digital converter. The shaded region is the converter's span;

Figure 3 is an example of a system having a partial-scale analog to digital converter whose spans are offset as needed to digitize the entire input signal;

15 Figure 4 is a block diagram of an analog to digital converter system according to an embodiment of the invention;

Figure 5 is a circuit diagram of a programmable gain preamplifier having adjustable offset in accordance with an embodiment of the invention;

Figure 6 is a block diagram of the calibration process of the AD converter

20 system in accordance with an embodiment of the invention; and

Figure 7 is a block diagram of the present AD converter system showing waveshapes during operation of the system.

DETAILED DESCRIPTION OF THE INVENTION

Reduced Span Analog to Digital Converter

5 To attain the simplicity advantage inherent in a reduced-resolution analog to digital converter, such a device is first connected to the input signal through a programmed gain preamplifier. Figure 2 shows the result of applying an input signal through such an amplifier to the analog to digital converter.

The programmed gain preamplifier matches the span of the analog to digital 10 converter against only a portion of the system input, as illustrated by the example of Fig. 2. The analog to digital converter's span covers only system inputs ranging between -0.005 to +0.005. By way of example, this corresponds to $\frac{1}{4}$ the span of the converter described in Fig. 1. It is important to note however, that if the analog to digital converter represented in Fig. 2 has $\frac{1}{4}$ the resolution of the converter represented in Fig.
15 1, both converters can resolve the limited span between -0.005 and +0.005 to the same resolution.

Offset Steps

The entire input signal range, from -0.01 to +0.01 in the example of Fig. 2, still requires coverage, however. This requirement can be met by vertically positioning the 20 converter's span by means of an offset value. Figure 3 shows this effect.

In Fig. 3, the span of the analog to digital converter is displaced along the vertical axis to one of eight overlapping positions. These are shown in the figure as shaded bands. The width of each band represents the analog to digital converter's span.

It can be appreciated from the figure that an advantage of this technique is that the preamplifier is designed to amplify the input signal at high gain while applying the offset value at low gain. The offset value thus requires a system level accuracy corresponding to the preamplifier's low gain value for offset divided by its high gain value for signals.

As will be described, a digital summing junction arrangement combines the analog to digital conversion results with the offset value, resulting in a higher precision overall conversion.

Offset Overlap

The offset bands illustrated in Fig. 3 are chosen to overlap, thereby providing hysteresis: The offset, once stepped to a new value, consequently need not be stepped back to its previous value should the input signal change back to a value covered by the previous band. This is necessary to accommodate signals having an oscillatory component.

Input Signal Limitations

As can be appreciated, input signals suitable for digitization by this technique are limited to those consisting of a low-frequency component (such as DC) upon which is superimposed an AC component. The magnitude of the AC component must be less than or equal to one-half the span of the converter. The majority of signal transducers, such as pressure to voltage converters, satisfy this requirement.

Turning now to Fig. 4, the system diagram of the present invention includes the following components:

- 5 1. Programmable gain preamplifier
2. Offset compensation digital summing junction

Other important components of the invention which are well known to practitioners of the art are:

1. Anti-alias filter
- 10 2. Analog to digital converter
3. Digital to analog converter

Programmed Gain Preamplifier

The programmed gain preamplifier as shown in Fig. 5 provides a high differential gain for the input signal and a low single-ended gain for the offset signal.

- 15 This circuit has two differential inputs and one single-ended input. The first of the two differential inputs is for signal and the second is for calibration. The signal input is applied differentially between the terminals labeled "Non-Inverting Differential Input" and "Inverting Differential Input". Calibration uses the terminals labeled "Calibration Input" and "Inverting Differential Input". Figure 5 shows the resistor " R_{CAL} " connected
- 20 between the calibration inputs. Note that the terminal labeled "Inverting Differential Input” is used for one side of both differential inputs. The single-ended input is applied to the terminal labeled “Offset (Input) Terminal”.

In the circuit of Fig. 5, the input differential gain is determined by a double-pole, eight position switch: Position 0 is the lowest gain position and position 7 is the highest gain position. It should be understood that the switches in the illustrated circuit can be mechanical, as shown, or can be electronic. Either implementation is suitable.

The signal appearing on the “Output Terminal” is the electrical sum of the input (either the differential input signal or calibration, depending upon which is selected) times the amplifier’s gain plus the voltage appearing on the “Offset Terminal” times a gain of 1.

Offset Generation

The voltage applied to the Offset (Input) Terminal shown in Fig. 5 is provided by a digital to analog converter. In the block diagram of Fig. 4, this circuit is labeled “Digital to Analog Converter” and is shown connected to the preamplifier’s offset terminal.

Calibration

Calibration of the present analog to digital converter system insures accuracy. Calibration can be implemented under microprocessor control (not shown) although other means such as a digital state machine may also be used.

Calibration for each of the offset values shown in Fig. 3 is required. This entails first switching the programmable gain preamplifier of Fig. 5 across the calibration resistor. This applies the equivalent of zero volts to the preamplifier's input so that any voltage appearing at its output is due entirely to preamplifier error voltages summed with voltages on its offset terminal. The first value of offset is then applied to the offset terminal. The resulting waveform is digitized by the 12-bit analog to digital converter 5 and is stored in memory.

The stored waveform is the calibration waveform for use when the offset is switched from zero to the first value of offset. This waveform is to be subtracted from the output signal whenever the offset is switched from zero to the first value of offset.

This process is repeated as the offset is switched from its first value to its second 10 value to create a second calibration waveform. The process is repeated for each of the offset transitions between adjacent values of offset, both up and down, resulting in 14 different calibration waveforms.

The appropriate calibration waveform is to be subtracted on a sample-by-sample basis whenever the offset value steps from one band to the next. The calibration 15 waveform must be applied synchronously with the offset step, in the aforementioned digital manner, to the digital subtraction process.

Figure 6 is a block diagram of this process for the generation of one calibration waveform. The waveforms shown are plots of voltages or numeric values vs. time.

Example

Figure 7 is deemed helpful in showing how the invention operates on an example signal and includes corresponding waveforms. It should be appreciated that the input signal shown in the figure is but one example of many possible.

5 As shown in Fig. 7, the example analog input signal to the programmable gain preamplifier is a sine wave whose offset shifts in a negative direction after approximately one-third of the time plotted along the horizontal axis. The span of the analog to digital converter is insufficient to cover the entire vertical dimensions of the waveform.

10 An offset signal, as shown in the figure, is applied to the preamplifier to keep the signal within the span capability of the analog to digital converter. The output of the anti-aliasing filter consequently remains within the span of the converter.

 The output of the analog to digital converter is processed digitally with one of the calibration waveforms as hereinbefore described to yield a higher-resolution, digital 15 version of the original waveform as shown in Fig. 7.

 It can be appreciated from both Fig. 6 and Fig. 7 as hereinbefore described, that calibration waveforms accommodate the anti-alias filter's frequency response. As a step signal, such as the one arising from the application of an offset signal to the preamplifier, is applied to a low-pass anti-alias filter, the output of the filter has a finite 20 rather than instantaneous rise time. This somewhat gradual transition is subtracted out since it is a replica of the waveform originally obtained during calibration.

CLAIMS

1. An analog to digital converter resolution enhancement method comprising the steps of:
 - connecting the input signal through a programmed gain preamplifier;
 - 5 utilizing the programmed gain preamplifier to match the full range of the analog to digital converter to the AC component of the input signal; and then,
 - complementing the analog to digital converter range by an offset value thereby causing the programmed gain preamplifier to amplify the input signal at high gain while applying the offset value at low gain.
- 10 2. An analog to digital converter having resolution enhancement comprising in combination:
 - an analog to digital converter having an input terminal and an output terminal;
 - 15 a programmed gain preamplifier having an input terminal for receiving an input signal and an output terminal coupled to the input terminal of said analog to digital converter;
 - said programmed gain preamplifier matching the full range of said analog to digital converter to only the AC component portion of the input signal;
 - 20 said analog to digital converter having a range complemented by an offset value; and a summing junction for combining the output of said analog to digital converter with said offset value thereby causing said programmed gain preamplifier to amplify the input signal at high gain while applying the offset value at low gain.

- 5 3. A method for calibrating the analog to digital converter having resolution enhancement of claim 2 including the steps of:

calibrating the analog to digital converter for each of a plurality of offset values; and,

10 wherein calibrating for each of a plurality of offset values includes generating a corresponding plurality of calibration waveforms.

4. In combination:

a reduced span analog to digital converter;

15 a programmed gain preamplifier coupled between an input terminal for receiving an input signal and said reduced span analog to digital converter;

said programmed gain preamplifier matching the span of said analog to digital converter against only a portion of the system input; and, the entire input signal range provided by positioning the converter's span by means of an offset value.

5. In combination:

a programmed gain preamplifier having an input terminal, an offset terminal, and an output terminal;

5 a digital summing junction;

said output terminal of said analog to digital converter coupled to said digital summing junction;

an anti-alias filter having an input terminal and an output terminal;

10 said output terminal of said anti-alias filter coupled to said input of said analog to digital converter;

said input terminal of said anti-alias filter coupled to said output terminal of said programmed gain preamplifier; and,

15 a digital to analog converter coupled between said digital summing junction and said offset terminal of said programmed gain preamplifier for providing an analog offset signal to said programmed gain preamplifier.

6. The combination according to claim 5 wherein said programmed gain preamplifier provides a high differential gain for the input signal and a low single-ended gain for said analog offset signal.

20

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An analog to digital converter for input signals having a low frequency component (such as DC) upon which is superimposed an AC component, the magnitude of the AC component being less than or equal to one-half the span of the analog to 5 digital converter.

Fig. 1Fig. 2

Fig. 3

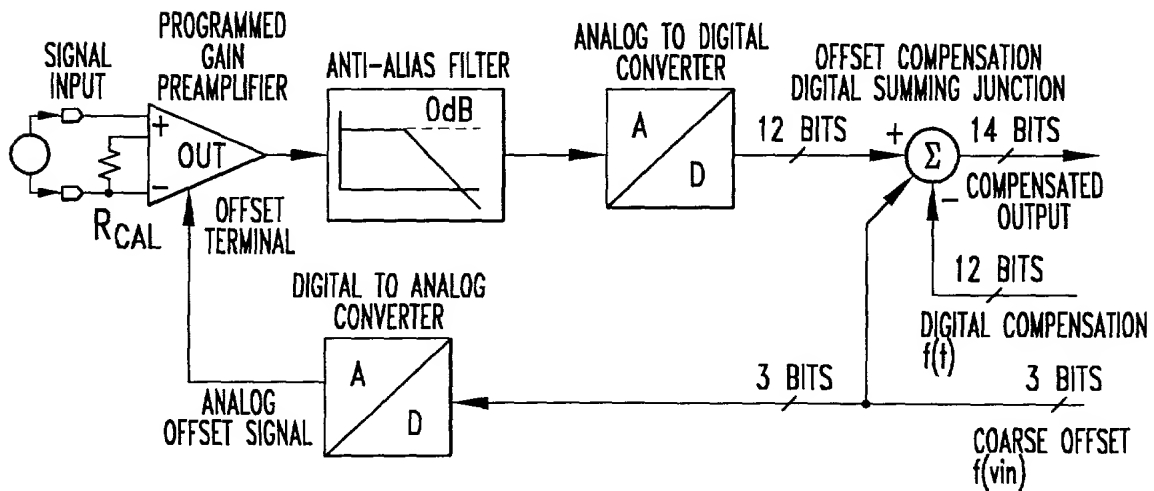

Fig. 4

Fig. 5

Fig. 6

Fig. 7

COMBINED DECLARATION AND POWER OF ATTORNEY

DECLARATION

My residence, post office address and citizenship are as stated below next to my name. I believe I am the original, first and sole inventor or an original, first and joint inventor of the subject matter which is claimed and for which a patent is sought on the invention entitled "Analog to Digital Converter Utilizing Resolution Enhancement," the specification of which is attached.

I have reviewed and understand the contents of the specification, including the claims.

I acknowledge my duty to disclose information which is material to patentability as defined in 37 CFR § 1.56(a).

POWER OF ATTORNEY

I appoint the following attorneys to prosecute this application and transact all business in the Patent and Trademark Office in connection with this application:

Paul C. Cullom	Reg. No. 25,580	John C. Hammar	Reg. No. 29,928
Ann K. Galbraith	Reg. No. 33,530	Lawrence W. Nelson	Reg. No. 34,684
Robert L. Gullette	Reg. No. 26,899	Robert R. Richardson	Reg. No. 40,143
James P. Hamley	Reg. No. 28,081

SEND CORRESPONDENCE TO:

Conrad O. Gardner
The Boeing Company
P.O. Box 3707, M/S 13-08
Seattle, WA 98124-2207

DIRECT TELEPHONE CALLS TO:

Conrad O. Gardner
(206) 544-1017

All statements I made of my own knowledge are true. All statements I made on information and belief I believe to be true. I made these statements with knowledge that whoever, in any matter within the jurisdiction of the Patent and Trademark Office, knowingly and willingly falsifies, conceals, or covers up a material fact by any trick, scheme, or device, or makes any false, fictitious, or fraudulent statements or representations, or makes or uses any false writing or document with knowledge that the writing, document, statement, or representation contains any false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement or entry, shall be subject to the penalties set forth under Section 1001 of Title 18 of the United States Code. I made these statements knowing that making false statements in violation of Section 1001 of Title 18 of the United States Code may jeopardize the validity of the application or document, or the validity or enforceability of any patent, trademark registration, or certification resulting from these false statements.

Full Name of First Inventor: John R. Stice

Inventor's Signature: John R. Stice

Date: 29 March 2000

Citizenship: U.S.A.

6006 153rd Ct. N.E.

Residence Address: Redmond, WA 98052

Post Office Address: The Boeing Company

P. O. Box 3707, M/S 13-08

Seattle, WA 98124-2207